Greetings community partners!

We are excited to launch the first quarterly newsletter highlighting UC Davis’ support for African American students and communities.

In this inaugural issue, we are particularly proud to announce a new initiative, the African American Network Newsletter. The mission of this initiative is to provide a platform for students to share their experiences and highlight the work being done to support African American students.

As part of this effort, we are establishing a network among campus community and faith-based organizations that provide academic preparation services to African American youth. Jordan Keys, a UC Davis alumna, and Campus Director Adina de la Torre join us in supporting this initiative.

We are also excited to introduce our new UC Davis Center for African American Studies. The Center will bring together students, faculty, and staff to engage in all aspects of campus life. We invite you to be part of the transformation to a campus where all students succeed and represent diversity.

Rheba Freeman
Associate Vice Chancellor for Enrollment Management
UC Davis Student Affairs

When Lang, Ph.D.
Associate Vice Chancellor for Student Life, Campus Community and Enrollment Services
UC Davis Student Affairs

Hello from Kayton Carter

My passion is to provide comprehensive support services to underserved college students who need them, and we are committed to helping them succeed at UC Davis. We will engage students in leaders, succeed academically and become changemakers in the world. Prior to coming to UC Davis, I was the Director for College Success at the College of Charleston. I’m looking forward to helping the High School and Community College students to UC Davis. The new Center for African American Student Success will bring students, faculty, and staff together to engage in all aspects of campus life. We will support students to develop as leaders, succeed academically and become changemakers in the world.

My name is Dr. Milhorn. I am a UC Davis graduate and have been teaching here since 1998. As director of the African American and African Studies program, I enjoy connecting with students. The UC Davis African American and African Studies program explores the social, economic, and political issues of African and African American communities. The program also provides academic and social support to African American students and brings together the black community at UC Davis.

Dr. Milhorn teaches regularly in an African American culture and has written a book, “The Color of Justice: The Role of Faith-Based Organizations in Contemporary African American Education.” I enjoy getting to know my students and see the ways that our program helps students succeed at UC Davis. I am committed to ensuring that UC Davis feels like home for African American students.

When Lang, Ph.D.
Associate Vice Chancellor for Student Life, Campus Community and Enrollment Services
UC Davis Student Affairs

By joining us in supporting this initiative, you will be UC Davis’ partner in reaching students who need them, and I am thrilled to welcome you to be part of the movement to see even more African American and African American students succeed at our top-ranked university! We welcome you to be part of the movement to see even more African American and African American students succeed at UC Davis.

Milton Lang, Ed.D.
Associate Vice Chancellor for Enrollment Management
UC Davis Student Affairs

African American and African Studies program,

We are also excited to announce that UC Davis has been named one of the top 25 most diverse institutions in the nation for African American students.

As a part of this effort, we are establishing a network among campus community and faith-based organizations that provide academic preparation services to African American youth. Jordan Keys, a UC Davis alumna, and Campus Director Adina de la Torre join us in supporting this initiative.

We are also excited to introduce our new UC Davis Center for African American Studies. The Center will bring together students, faculty, and staff to engage in all aspects of campus life. We invite you to be part of the transformation to a campus where all students succeed and represent diversity.

Rheba Freeman
Associate Vice Chancellor for Enrollment Management
UC Davis Student Affairs

When Lang, Ph.D.
Associate Vice Chancellor for Student Life, Campus Community and Enrollment Services
UC Davis Student Affairs

Hello from Kayton Carter

My passion is to provide comprehensive support services to underserved college students who need them, and we are committed to helping them succeed at UC Davis. We will engage students in leaders, succeed academically and become changemakers in the world. Prior to coming to UC Davis, I was the Director for College Success at the College of Charleston. I’m looking forward to helping the High School and Community College students to UC Davis. The new Center for African American Student Success will bring students, faculty, and staff together to engage in all aspects of campus life. We will support students to develop as leaders, succeed academically and become changemakers in the world.

My name is Dr. Milhorn. I am a UC Davis graduate and have been teaching here since 1998. As director of the African American and African Studies program, I enjoy connecting with students. The UC Davis African American and African Studies program explores the social, economic, and political issues of African and African American communities. The program also provides academic and social support to African American students and brings together the black community at UC Davis.

Dr. Milhorn teaches regularly in an African American culture and has written a book, “The Color of Justice: The Role of Faith-Based Organizations in Contemporary African American Education.” I enjoy getting to know my students and see the ways that our program helps students succeed at UC Davis. I am committed to ensuring that UC Davis feels like home for African American students.

When Lang, Ph.D.
Associate Vice Chancellor for Student Life, Campus Community and Enrollment Services
UC Davis Student Affairs

African American and African Studies program,

We are also excited to announce that UC Davis has been named one of the top 25 most diverse institutions in the nation for African American students.

As a part of this effort, we are establishing a network among campus community and faith-based organizations that provide academic preparation services to African American youth. Jordan Keys, a UC Davis alumna, and Campus Director Adina de la Torre join us in supporting this initiative.

We are also excited to introduce our new UC Davis Center for African American Studies. The Center will bring together students, faculty, and staff to engage in all aspects of campus life. We invite you to be part of the transformation to a campus where all students succeed and represent diversity.

Rheba Freeman
Associate Vice Chancellor for Enrollment Management
UC Davis Student Affairs

When Lang, Ph.D.
Associate Vice Chancellor for Student Life, Campus Community and Enrollment Services
UC Davis Student Affairs

Hello from Kayton Carter

My passion is to provide comprehensive support services to underserved college students who need them, and we are committed to helping them succeed at UC Davis. We will engage students in leaders, succeed academically and become changemakers in the world. Prior to coming to UC Davis, I was the Director for College Success at the College of Charleston. I’m looking forward to helping the High School and Community College students to UC Davis. The new Center for African American Student Success will bring students, faculty, and staff together to engage in all aspects of campus life. We will support students to develop as leaders, succeed academically and become changemakers in the world.

My name is Dr. Milhorn. I am a UC Davis graduate and have been teaching here since 1998. As director of the African American and African Studies program, I enjoy connecting with students. The UC Davis African American and African Studies program explores the social, economic, and political issues of African and African American communities. The program also provides academic and social support to African American students and brings together the black community at UC Davis.

Dr. Milhorn teaches regularly in an African American culture and has written a book, “The Color of Justice: The Role of Faith-Based Organizations in Contemporary African American Education.” I enjoy getting to know my students and see the ways that our program helps students succeed at UC Davis. I am committed to ensuring that UC Davis feels like home for African American students.

When Lang, Ph.D.
Associate Vice Chancellor for Student Life, Campus Community and Enrollment Services
UC Davis Student Affairs

African American and African Studies program,

We are also excited to announce that UC Davis has been named one of the top 25 most diverse institutions in the nation for African American students.

As a part of this effort, we are establishing a network among campus community and faith-based organizations that provide academic preparation services to African American youth. Jordan Keys, a UC Davis alumna, and Campus Director Adina de la Torre join us in supporting this initiative.

We are also excited to introduce our new UC Davis Center for African American Studies. The Center will bring together students, faculty, and staff to engage in all aspects of campus life. We invite you to be part of the transformation to a campus where all students succeed and represent diversity.

Rheba Freeman
Associate Vice Chancellor for Enrollment Management
UC Davis Student Affairs

When Lang, Ph.D.
Associate Vice Chancellor for Student Life, Campus Community and Enrollment Services
UC Davis Student Affairs

Hello from Kayton Carter

My passion is to provide comprehensive support services to underserved college students who need them, and we are committed to helping them succeed at UC Davis. We will engage students in leaders, succeed academically and become changemakers in the world. Prior to coming to UC Davis, I was the Director for College Success at the College of Charleston. I’m looking forward to helping the High School and Community College students to UC Davis. The new Center for African American Student Success will bring students, faculty, and staff together to engage in all aspects of campus life. We will support students to develop as leaders, succeed academically and become changemakers in the world.

My name is Dr. Milhorn. I am a UC Davis graduate and have been teaching here since 1998. As director of the African American and African Studies program, I enjoy connecting with students. The UC Davis African American and African Studies program explores the social, economic, and political issues of African and African American communities. The program also provides academic and social support to African American students and brings together the black community at UC Davis.

Dr. Milhorn teaches regularly in an African American culture and has written a book, “The Color of Justice: The Role of Faith-Based Organizations in Contemporary African American Education.” I enjoy getting to know my students and see the ways that our program helps students succeed at UC Davis. I am committed to ensuring that UC Davis feels like home for African American students.

When Lang, Ph.D.
Associate Vice Chancellor for Student Life, Campus Community and Enrollment Services
UC Davis Student Affairs

African American and African Studies program,

We are also excited to announce that UC Davis has been named one of the top 25 most diverse institutions in the nation for African American students.

As a part of this effort, we are establishing a network among campus community and faith-based organizations that provide academic preparation services to African American youth. Jordan Keys, a UC Davis alumna, and Campus Director Adina de la Torre join us in supporting this initiative.

We are also excited to introduce our new UC Davis Center for African American Studies. The Center will bring together students, faculty, and staff to engage in all aspects of campus life. We invite you to be part of the transformation to a campus where all students succeed and represent diversity.

Rheba Freeman
Associate Vice Chancellor for Enrollment Management
UC Davis Student Affairs

When Lang, Ph.D.
Associate Vice Chancellor for Student Life, Campus Community and Enrollment Services
UC Davis Student Affairs

Hello from Kayton Carter

My passion is to provide comprehensive support services to underserved college students who need them, and we are committed to helping them succeed at UC Davis. We will engage students in leaders, succeed academically and become changemakers in the world. Prior to coming to UC Davis, I was the Director for College Success at the College of Charleston. I’m looking forward to helping the High School and Community College students to UC Davis. The new Center for African American Student Success will bring students, faculty, and staff together to engage in all aspects of campus life. We will support students to develop as leaders, succeed academically and become changemakers in the world.

My name is Dr. Milhorn. I am a UC Davis graduate and have been teaching here since 1998. As director of the African American and African Studies program, I enjoy connecting with students. The UC Davis African American and African Studies program explores the social, economic, and political issues of African and African American communities. The program also provides academic and social support to African American students and brings together the black community at UC Davis.

Dr. Milhorn teaches regularly in an African American culture and has written a book, “The Color of Justice: The Role of Faith-Based Organizations in Contemporary African American Education.” I enjoy getting to know my students and see the ways that our program helps students succeed at UC Davis. I am committed to ensuring that UC Davis feels like home for African American students.

When Lang, Ph.D.
Associate Vice Chancellor for Student Life, Campus Community and Enrollment Services
UC Davis Student Affairs

African American and African Studies program,