MONDAVI CENTER FOR THE PERFORMING ARTS

Sankai Juku

Originating in post-war Japan in the 1960s, avant-garde dance form Butoh is often difficult to narrowly define. But the visual markers—slow, mesmerizing movements, a dreamlike state, and shaven-head dancers covered head-to-toe in white talc—are quintessential parts of Japan’s famed Butoh troupe Sankai Juku. The company was founded in 1975 by Usui Amagatsu, whose work blends the basics of Butoh with themes surrounding life, death and creation. His latest piece, UMUSUNA, explores the connection between fleeting human existence and the eternity of nature and the universe.

Jazz at Lincoln Center Orchestra with Wynton Marsalis
Led by consummate trumpeter Wynton Marsalis and comprised of 15 of the finest soloists, ensemble players and arrangers, the Jazz at Lincoln Center Orchestra has been hailed as “the greatest large jazz ensemble working today” by the Chicago Tribune. Over his many cherished appearances at the Mondavi Center, Marsalis has compelled and charmed audiences while presenting the full vigor and vision of America’s music, as interpreted by some of our finest living musicians. The Orchestra will draw from a repertory that includes classic Blue Note Records selections and tunes made famous by John Coltrane, Duke Ellington, Gerry Mulligan, John Lewis and more.

Wednesday, September 30, 2015 | 8 – 10pm
Mavis Staples and Joan Osborne
One’s a little bit gospel, the other’s a little bit rock and roll. But Mavis Staples and Joan Osborne share some important common ground: they’re both exceptional singers with a deep respect for soul, blues and R&B, and a determination to stay true to their respective artistic muses, wherever that might take their careers. Staples is a living legend, a Rock and Roll hall of famer whose commanding voice has moved listeners for decades. Osborne is a multi-platinum selling singer-songwriter, and a high-energy performer with an infectious spirit. Backed by Staples’ exemplary band, the two singers will take the stage individually and together to raise the roof and deliver a master class in song.

Sunday, October 4, 2015 | 4 – 6pm
Rising Stars of Opera
Rising Stars of Opera presents San Francisco Opera’s Adler Fellows, a select group of exceptionally gifted young singers who are gracing renowned opera house stages throughout the world. Now a celebrated Mondavi Center tradition.
This special event is presented in honor of Barbara K. Jackson, our dear Mondavi Center friend, whose generosity allows this performance to be free to the community.
